

Written sign in workplaces eg: sign outside a construction site indicate warnings, caution and ~~the~~ safety signals that are given out to employees and other people these signs should be presented largely and clearly, with no obstruct of other posters ~~of~~ or objects such as boards lumber etc: just so they are visible to see.

Verbal ~~the~~ communication is common to everyone eg: face-to-face these types of communications are highly effective due to the world be loud and clear where as in a loud environment it can be hard for a person to listen to ~~the~~ what ~~any~~ another person is saying in order to complete a task. Shouting is another negative way of communicating.

Non-verbal ways such as hand gestures do have some advantages and disadvantages. eg: advantages that it can be used to communicate from metres away it is helpful for the other person(s) to understand what the person wants or is telling you to do. eg: sign language is used to talk to deaf people. In the workplace for example the airport, crane drivers are given non-~~verbal~~ verbal instructions and directions in order to complete a task. The disadvantages can be the other people can misunderstand and do the task wrong and could dangerously injure themselves or others. or it could mean something bad 'in different cultures or in sign language only if you intended to do the action front or directly at them.